Europe is consolidated as the largest customer for Spanish exports

The Spanish export is still on the crest of the wave, and there is a fact that illustrates it perfectly: sales of goods and services to other countries have doubled from 2005 to today, and in the first half of 2017 have increased by 10% over the same period of the previous year. And among all this unstoppable increase, Europe, or rather, the European Union, is the main protagonist.

The EU receives 72.3% of all products that leave our borders, a figure that produces vertigo, especially when compared to the record that was in 2008, less than a decade ago, 59.71%. France, Germany, Portugal, Italy, the United Kingdom and, to a lesser extent, the Netherlands make up the main customer core of Spanish exports , which despite its good health, has a key issue to resolve, opening up to new markets.

The protectionism proposed by Donald Trump in the United States and the policies aimed at strengthening the internal market in China have become two hard pitfalls for a Spanish export that sees two of the world's largest importers close their doors . That is why the national companies, whose activity lives a continuous and intense growth, are in the search of new and emerging markets that relocate a sector monopolized by the European powers

Where to export in 2017? The 5 most interesting countries for the Spanish market

The export is a sector in full economic boom , but the crest of the wave of its growth is still to come and there is still time to take advantage of the force of a current that accepts new passengers. There are still large emerging markets to discover and exploit, whose appearance makes changing the roadmap of our map an option to take into account:

Denmark : According to data provided by the prestigious Forbes magazine, the Scandinavian country is the nation with the highest minimum wage in the world, and economic inequalities between different incomes are practically non-existent. Its great financial power makes Denmark a suitable territory to complete an interesting client portfolio

Morocco : The rise in the minimum wage in the North African country has been one of the main drivers (together with public employment and inflation control) that have generated an economic growth of 5%, which has mainly affected domestic demand. The sum of these agents has been the perfect breeding ground to increase purchasing power in most Moroccan homes, a factor that makes this territory fertile land for export, and also has the advantage of its proximity to Spain (which means a reduction in logistics costs), and also, to be a port of entry to explore other African markets

Croatia : The majority of our European neighbors have already advanced positions to enter the market of the Balkan country, whose interest lies mainly in being the threshold to other nations in Southeast Europe. Its economy, somewhat stagnant, and its size, just over four million inhabitants, do not detract from a territory in which Germany, Austria or Italy have already decided to venture, but without having the good image of quality / price that Only Spain holds, a distinction worth using in this Adriatic country

Germany : The great European power could not be missing in this ranking, since it is a powerful partner to take into account for most Spanish companies. Security and the legal-fiscal framework, which bears great similarities with Spanish, form a robust tandem that converts the German nation into a country that should not be lacking in any client portfolio

Ireland : Perhaps overshadowed by its gigantic neighbor, the United Kingdom, the Brexit confirmation has finally placed them on the map of Spanish companies. It is one of the most abandoned markets by national companies, which have never explored this territory, perhaps driven away by a financial crisis already overcome, and in what way. Despite needing a bailout in a still very recent past, Ireland is today the European nation with the highest economic growth, with an annual rate of 5%, and its inhabitants enjoy the second highest per capita income of the entire continent

[: en] The export sector is a huge economic boom, but the peak of the growth wave is yet to come and there is still time to harness the power of a current that accepts new passengers. The major emerging markets discovered and exploited, whose appearance makes change the roadmap of our map is an option to take into account:

Denmark : According to data provided by the prestigious Forbes magazine, the Scandinavian country is the highest nation in the world's minimum wage, and economic disparities between different incomes are virtually non-existent. Its great financial strength make Denmark an appropriate territory to complete an interesting client portfolio

Morocco : raising the minimum wage in the North African country was one of the main drivers (for public employment and inflation control) that generated economic growth of 5%, which particularly affected domestic demand. The sum of these agents has been the ideal breeding ground for increasing purchasing power in most Moroccan households, a factor that makes this territory fertile for export, and also has the advantage of its proximity to the country. Its economy, something stagnant, and its size, a little over four million inhabitants, no less attractive territory where Germany, Austria and Italy have already decided to venture, but without the good quality image / price that Spain cherishes, a distinction worth using in this country on the Adriatic

Germany : The great European power could not fail in this ranking because it is a powerful partner to take into account for most Spanish companies. The security and legal and fiscal framework, which holds huge similarities with the Spanish, form a solid tandem that make the German nation in a country that should not be missed in a client

Ireland : Perhaps overshadowed by its giant neighbor, the UK, Brexit's confirmation put them on the map at the end of Spanish companies. It is one of the most neglected by domestic companies, which has never explored this territory, perhaps driven by a financial crisis and overcome the markets, and how. In need of a bailout despite a very recent past, Ireland is today the fastest growing European nation at an annual rate of 5%, and its inhabitants enjoy the second highest income per capita. inhabitant across the continent
